

BARTLETT STREETSCAPE

BARTLETT STREETSCAPE IMPROVEMENT PROJECT

The Bartlett Streetscape Improvement Project, situated on Bartlett Street between 21st and 22nd Street, seeks to provide a community space for health fairs, events, and markets. The initiative originated from the Mission District Streetscape Plan, a community-based plan developed by the San Francisco Planning Department in collaboration with other City agencies. The revitalization of Bartlett Street as a “Complete Street” will serve to be a gathering space for families, local artists, and merchants.

A COORDINATED EFFORT

A long-term community-based design has been developed by a local partnership between the Mission Community Market Collaborative and the local design/build firm ReBar. This coordinated initiative has led to successful sources of community funding and local stewardship for the project.

COMMUNITY PLANNING & STEWARDSHIP

Collaboration between SFMTA, SF Planning, and DPW has been instrumental in developing this neighborhood project. Two community meetings were held at CCSF, with two more at The Women’s Building in the Mission District. Additionally, three outreach sessions were held at the Thursday market and two at Sunday Streets. The completed project aims to be an important space for the community, creating opportunities for local artists and small businesses.

PROJECT HIGHLIGHTS

- Conversion of Bartlett Street to a “Complete Street” hosting markets and community events.
- Construct new widened sidewalks and install new roadway paving and bike parking facilities.
- Install new pedestrian lighting and sidewalk gardens to enhance the aesthetics of the and increase safety.
- Install permanent canopy /pergola structures to be used as market stalls during events. (As part of a separate project)
- Tree plantings line the sidewalk and act as gateways to the street.
